EOS magazine operates out of four converted farm buildings in a courtyard just off the village green in Tackley. Tackley is situated in the Cherwell Valley, 8 miles north of Oxford, just off the A4260 Oxford to Banbury road. Junctions 9 and 10 of the M40 motorway are only seven miles away.

If travelling north (towards Banbury) on the A4260, take the turn for Tackley opposite Sturdy's Castle, down Church Hill onto Medcroft Road, then bear left when you reach the village green. The entrance for EOS magazine is up the gravel driveway on your left. If you are travelling south on the A4260 take the single-track road on the left signposted for Tackley about two miles south of Hopcroft's Holt and turn right into the gravel entrance at the junction of the green and Ball Lane. Look for the tall thatched building – this is the main EOS magazine office. The training venue is to the rear and is known as The Dovecote.

The tall thatched stable is prominent on the horizon. The main doors for each of the four buildings are in the courtyard. There is ample parking around the outside of the buildings (marked in red).
